

Project: Touching Eden House

Team: Wallflower Architecture + Design

Size: 1374m²

Location: Bukit Timah, Singapore

Feature:

Project - Nestled in Singapore's lush Botanic Gardens, the striking Touching Eden House seamlessly integrates nature into its design. Conceived by Wallflower Architecture + Design, the residence embraces the tranquility of its rainforest surroundings with floor-to-ceiling windows that dissolve boundaries between interior and exterior. Strategically elevated sanctuaries positioned to embrace panoramic treetop views establish an atmosphere of calm. The interplay of light and shadow permeates the interior, bathing the space in the golden glow of sunlight filtered through a leafy canopy. Nature asserts its presence at every turn - vines cascade down the façade while the grounds host meticulously landscaped gardens.

Evoking harmony between urban living and the natural environment, Touching Eden House provides an ethereal retreat from city life. Its contemplative spaces nurture creativity amid lush tropical greenery. The expressive exterior cloaked in vegetation establishes a symbiotic dialogue with the Botanic Gardens' heritage. Conscientiously crafted by teams of specialists overseen by the visionary owner, Touching Eden House masterfully blends contemporary luxury with biophilic sensibilities. A respite for the senses, this sanctuary in the city marvels in the beauty of nature's all-encompassing embrace.

Design Team - Founded in 1999 by Tan Chai Chong Robin and Cecil Chee, Wallflower Architecture + Design brings extensive experience across commercial and residential projects. Recognized early on by Singapore's Ministry of Information, Communication and the Arts as an industry leader, Wallflower offers comprehensive design encompassing architecture, interiors, lighting and furnishings. Spanning private residences to mixed-use developments, Wallflower's portfolio reveals creative solutions tailored to each project. Their design philosophy distills innovative virtue out of necessity, believing intelligence and beauty are inextricable. Seamlessly fusing urban environments with natural light and greenery, Wallflower's award-winning work enriches the human spirit.