

Project: House in Nishimachi

Design Team: TYdo architects

Size: 156.99 m²

Location: Iwata City, JAPAN

Feature:

Project - Nestled in a vibrant festival district of Iwata City, Shizuoka, the Nishimachi Residence brilliantly fuses community celebration with modern living. Designed by Yosuke Kodatsuka of TYdo architects, this two-story wooden abode ingeniously caters to the client's desire for a gathering space while preserving family privacy.

The standout feature is the seamless integration of a semi-outdoor living room cum parking area and a family living room, separated by a courtyard. This innovative layout allows the spaces to be flexibly partitioned or combined via blinds, accommodating both festive gatherings that extend late into the night as well as intimate family time.

Conceptually distinct from its surroundings which blend old residences with new developments, the residence's sculptural form takes on a layered box aesthetic. This visually striking facade articulates four zones transitioning from the welcoming communal areas to the most private quarters.

Kodatsuka's sensitive approach taps into the region's festival heritage and communal fabric, offering a contemporary take on Iwata's rich locality. The Nishimachi Residence exemplifies how thoughtful architecture can foster age-old traditions within a modern residential setting.

Design Team - Founded in 2016, TYdo architects is a Tokyo-based design firm helmed by principal architect Yosuke Takatsuka. With a keen eye for integrating architecture with allied creative disciplines, the practice has carved a unique niche by offering comprehensive coordination services spanning graphic design, web development, branding, and more.

Under Takatsuka's leadership, TYdo has amassed an impressive portfolio showcasing their adept ability to translate client visions into tangible, thoughtfully-crafted solutions. Their architectural approach transcends disciplinary boundaries, seeking optimal resolutions through meticulous problem-solving and inventive conceptualization.

The firm's work deftly navigates context and community, exemplified by projects like the Nishimachi Residence which celebrates the festival heritage of Iwata City. With a keen awareness of locality, TYdo creates architecture that is sensitively grounded yet uncompromisingly contemporary.

As an architectural design consultancy pushing creative frontiers, TYdo architects epitomizes professionalism backed by a passionate, multidisciplinary ethos. Their innovative buildings and diverse services position them as vanguards within Japan's architectural vanguard.
